1. HOST EVENTS FOR FREE

Ever wanted to host an event? Most likely your university has space you can use for your event! You should check with Event Services at your university. If you don't have Event Services at your university, think about what department would be able to help you. Furthermore, you should think about what type of event you want to host. If you want to host an event to help the environment, doing an event with environmental clubs at your university will make it easier for you to use a free classroom or auditorium for your events.

2. DISCOUNTED HARDWARE AND OFFICE EQUIPMENT

Only two words for this: surplus sale! A lot of universities have old computers and office supplies that they no longer need. In order to get rid of all of it, universities will host surplus sells. It makes it easy to get that computer monitor or desk you needed! If you're not sure if your university does surplus sales, ask around. If that doesn't work, try contacting different departments at your university such as Facilities.

3. OUTDOOR ADVENTURES

Going camping or taking a hike is fun, but organizing a trip can be a pain. Well, a lot of universities host free events where they will take you camping or go on a hike. Sometimes, you may have to help with a clean-up, but it's worth it! Some ways to find out about these trips is asking people on campus, talking to clubs that do outing events and checking your universities events calendar.
